

Welcome to the RESPCCT Study Engagement Survey

Building meaningful relationships and enhancing engagement experiences among all stakeholders, including community partners, healthcare professionals, and researchers, is essential to conducting effective community-led participatory research. We invite you to participate in this 10-15 minute survey about your involvement in the RESPCCT study to date. Your responses will help us understand your experiences and any suggestions you may have for how we can improve stakeholder experiences in the future. All feedback and comments will be anonymous and will NOT be linked to your personal details or affect your future engagement with the Birth Place Lab.

Who is conducting this study?

The RESPCCT study team includes current and future parents, service providers, researchers, health systems leaders, and community partners. A Steering Council of people who had recent experiences with pregnancy are working with the following researchers to evaluate the study team's experiences to date:

You have been invited to complete this engagement evaluation survey because you have been identified as a member of the Steering Council, Co-Investigator, pilot tester, Delphi panel member, Regional Recruitment Coordinator, Birth Place Lab staff or collaborator of the RESPCCT study.

Data will also be used to improve our engagement efforts and might be published or presented at conferences. Your participation is voluntary. Please note that all feedback and comments will be treated anonymously, and as such cannot be linked to your personal details.

By completing the survey you consent to participate in this evaluation.
